Aug. 10th	76	12mo. ...	1st ...	500	Printed	0 6 0	Ashutosh Ghosh & Co., 49, Shibnáráyan Das's Lane, Calcutta.	A drama describing how a staunch old Kulin Bráhmín is foiled in his purpose of marrying his young daughter to a Kulin of high position, but 80 years of age. The brother of the girl, an English-knowing Babu, along with some friends, all members of a Subhadáyini Sabhá, successfully carries out a plan for substituting an educated young man for the aged Kulin who, though he loses his bride, is content to go away after a good supper and with some rich presents. Such struggles are not uncommon in modern Bengali society.	224
July 28th	44	8vo. ...	1st ...	1,000	ditto ...	0 8 0	Durgácharan Ráya of Monghyr.	This drama depicts the evil which has now sprung up in Hindu society of marrying girls to worthless boys at a ruinous expense merely because the latter have passed one or more examinations of the Calcutta University. The manners of the University boys are depicted in somewhat exaggerated colours, but the picture may be taken as faithful for many a case. The price of 'passed' boys has gone up so high in the matrimonial market that a middle-class man is actually ruined if he has even so many as two or three daughters to marry.	225

July 23rd	18	18mo. ... 1st ...	200	ditto ...	0 2 0	Sāhitya Utsāhini Sabhā, Harinābhi.	The author is meditating on a fair moonlit night, the beauty of which fills his mind with grief for the departed glory of India	249 and her present destitute condition. The poet repudiates the idea, commonly entertained, that India is now poor because thieves have robbed her of everything, and attributes her misery to the worthlessness of her sons, who, unable to engage in commerce and other independent occupations, swell the ranks of keranidom.
July 18th	54	12mo. ... 1st ...	1,000	ditto ...	0 3 0	Ashutosh Ghosh & Co., 8, Mitra's Lane, Calcutta.	Contains 100 songs on the ancient and present condition of India, calculated to rouse patriotic feelings. Ancient India is described as the land of glory and happiness; modern India as an unfortunate country which has lost its glory, its learning, its wealth, its beauty, its poetry, its happiness, its everything. This idea is expressed in various forms.	250
Aug. 4th	19	12mo. ... 1st ...	1,000	ditto ...	0 2 0	Bihārīlāl Gangopādhyāya, 55, College Street, Calcutta.	Nawāb Seraj-ud-Daulā carried off by force Satyawati, the wife of the Brahmin Gossaindās, who was under the protection of	251
Mahārāni Bhavāni. He next endeavoured to carry off the Mahārāni's own daughter Tārāmani, but Kumār Krishnadās secretly carried her elsewhere and thus foiled the Nawāb. The poem, says the author, is written as if in imitation of Krishnadās's letter or in his character. It extols the ancient valour and civilisation of India; deplores the past greatness of the ancient Hindus; and calls upon the Hindus to destroy the Jābanas with the help of the English.

Aug. 13th	16	8vo. ...	1st ...	500	Printed..	0 2 0	Ishán Chandra Basu, Calcutta.	The celebrated Srimadbhāgbat in simple Bengali verse. This part contains a portion of the first book. The author says that if he can secure a sufficient	283 number of subscribers for his work, he will in the next part put in the original Sanskrit with commentaries. The idea of the translator is the same as that of Bábu Ráj Krishna Ráy in his translation of the Rámáyána in Bengali verse.
July 5th	87	12mo. ...	1st ...	1,000	ditto ...	0 8 0	Dina Náth Banerji, of Garalgá-há, zilla Hughli.	A philosophical work on such subjects as 'atoms and the formation of animal life,' 'the soul and the brain,' 'immortality,' 'the structure of the	284 body,' 'the relation between Creator and creation,' 'the first cause,' 'divine unity,' &c. The book is intended for Hindu women who require, according to the author, new ideas in the place of those which they are discarding as false and injurious. It is written in colloquial Bengali and in the form of dialogues.
June 9th	82	8vo. ...	2nd	1,000	ditto ...	0 8 0	Raj Náráyan Basu.	An enlarged edition of a pamphlet which at its first appearance excited much public interest and attracted the attention	285 of the late Viceroy, Lord Northbrook. By Sekal is meant the period between the establishment of English rule in India and the foundation of the Hindu College in Calcutta; by Ekál , the succeeding period. The writer has drawn a contrast between the Bengalis of the first period with those of the second, a contrast much in favour of the former generation.
„ 25th	17	8vo. ...	1st ...	500	ditto ...	0 4 0	Biswanáth Datta of Simla, Calcutta.	The writer, who has seen many parts of India and Indian society in many forms, has noted down the different forms of	286

July 26th	26	12mo. ...	6th ...	6,000	ditto ...	0 1 0	Beni Mádhava Bhattacharya, 115, Chitpur Road, Calcutta.	This is an improved edition of the work. For the entertainment of boys, several pictures of trees and animals have	234 been given, and a large number of examples of orthographical formation have been added to each orthographical lesson.
" 25th	8	12mo. ...	1st ...	1,000	ditto ...	0 0 3	Sarata Chandra Dev, S. Mitra's Lane, Calcutta.	Contains the alphabet and lessons for learning it. The object of the author is to reduce the cost of young children's education,	235 who generally require several copies of an alphabetical primer, each costing not less than one anna, before they are able to learn the alphabet and the simplest combinations of letters. The price of Prathama Siksha is therefore fixed at one pice per copy.
" 5th	8	Not given.	2nd ...	5,000	ditto ...	0 0 3	Not given ...	Contains fewer lessons for exercise, but is cheaper by 75 per cent. than Pandit Iswara Chandra Bidyásagara's Barnapari-chaya , Part I.	236

June 22nd	88	12mo.	... 1st ...	2,000	Printed	0 6 0	Jadunāth Datta...	A Baisnaba work, setting forth the glorious character of the Baisnaba sect, the spiritual greatness of the bhakta or devout lover of Baisnabism, the grandeur and glory of the name of Vishnu, &c. Devoutly read by Baisnabas for acquiring religious merit and silencing heretics.	9
15th	25	Svo.	... 2nd ...	250	ditto ...	0 4 0	Not given	The Sāktas and Baisnabas of Bengal differ from each other in the matter of the performance of Srāddhas . The former will perform them on the tithi , called ekādasi (11th day of the dark side of the moon), but the latter will not. The observance of fasts, &c., in connection with definite tithis also gives rise to differences of opinion among them by reason of their different ways of calculating tithis with reference to sunrise. The object of this treatise, a reprint in an enlarged form of an earlier publication, is to establish the correctness of Baisnaba practices on these points by an examination of the texts of the Sāstras bearing upon them,—the Haribhaktibīds being a work of very high authority among Baisnabas.	10
